

New Roseland Marquee is Complete

IT'S BEEN A FEW months since the Roseland Theatre's new marquee went up. It was turned on the first time in late September, to the delight of Pana and area residents. But there was more neon lighting and light bulbs to go, along with the roof and ceiling of the structure.

Around Christmas, the project was completed. The picture was taken Dec. 30, with owners Selma and Bill Norton standing beneath the marquee. The name "Roseland" is in pink neon, with red neon lines at each end of the side panels. A pretty light blue in front, and behind "Roseland" on each side adds contrast.
